Soft suburbanites Martyn and Gail are selling their house to working-class toughs Ray and Sheila, who in turn plan to sell their house to ex-con Dave and his girlfriend Di. As is the nature of the house-buying chain, Martyn and Gail have simultaneously exchanged contracts to buy the house belonging to Denise and her henpecked husband Barrie.

When the next link in the chain collapses, Denise and Barrie face having to move into rented accommodation, unless they can persuade Martyn and Gail to pull out of the contract. On the evening when Ray and Sheila come round to con Martyn into knocking pounds 10,000 off the asking price with the aid of a dodgy survey, Denise and Barrie decide to do everything in their power to put Ray and Sheila off buying - starting with dismantling the boiler.
