In a small Dartmoor hotel in postwar Britain, a group of long-term residents are eking out their lives in genteel poverty. The colonel is a loveable old blimp, Mrs Whyte is tight-lipped upper-middle-class widow who has fallen on hard times, and variety is added by Mrs Ashworth, a member of the lower classes who would be more at home in Albert Square, and Julius Winterhalter, a refugee displaced from Vienna to Devon. Life passes slowly and without excitement until a blizzard and an accident with the Rolls deposits the glamorous, cosmopolitan Lancasters in their midst. Soon everyone is reassessing their lives faster than you can say toasted teacake. Apparently, Dame Edith Evans rescued NC
